Yields and bond volatility (MOVE) only surged since Fed Chair Warsh spoke at Jackson Hole. This suggests markets could respond to dovish data and a lot is on tap for next week.

Video: Our analysis shows that long-term yields and bond volatility only started surging after Fed Chair's speech at Jackson Hole. That was when he surprised markets with a very hawkish message. And since then, yields have surged. This makes me wonder if this argues for the idea of a policy error. Moreover, we may get dovish data next week.

We still expect stocks to finish September strong and positive. The S&P 500 is up slightly for the month and Nasdaq 100 (QQQ -0.13%) up 3.5%. But we think we are near maximum pain and therefore, stocks can rise into the end of the month. Yes, this despite the surge in yields.

- US 10-year yields are now solidly above 5%. And there is understandable concerns about yields and the message signaled by higher yields. Given rates have risen around the world, this is even more unsettling.
- But to us, what is more surprising, is that US yields and US bond market volatility only surged since late August. As the chart below shows:
 - US 10-yr yields spiked and bond volatility surged
 - after August 28th
 - that was the date Fed Chair Warsh spoke at Jackson Hole.

- And his speech was surprisingly hawkish, pointing to Fed's own impatience with inflation. And then the Fed hiked in Sept.
 - and yields and bond volatility (MOVE) surged again
- So, what is driving higher rates? Is it the multiple factors cited by experts such as excess growth, or supply of debt or term premium?
- Or is it because the Fed suddenly agreed with those worried about inflation? Or is this a policy error?
- Time will tell. If incoming data comes in less hawkish, ala, lower inflation pressures, then we believe markets and Fed will walk back on the hawkishness. That is our base case. And the next 6 months will be key.
- We think this is ultimately a bullish setup:
 - Peak hawkish Fed.
 - Incrementally “dovish” data points ahead
 - Fed speak in weeks ahead likely “walk back” hawkish Fed.
 - On Sep 30, new Core PCE under new methodology. Current SEP 3.4% and expected downward revision is 20-40 bps. The FOMC seems to have not incorporated these well telegraphed changes in making these projections.
 - Oct 3rd, September jobs forecast could be soft.
 - President Trump did not get angry about FOMC rate decision. Is this reinforcing idea FOMC just wants to get markets “max hawkish” ahead of better data?
- Next week is a big week for macro data:

- In the coming week, there will be a lot of Fed speak, and this, in our view, will result in FOMC walking back on the “max hawkish” words of Warsh:

Bottom line: We expect stocks to rally into month-end

The S&P 500 is up slightly so far this month. We think there is a positive setup into month-end and the up move could be very sharply positive — aka “face ripper”

- Foremost, we believe underlying fundamentals remain solid
- Investor sentiment remains cautious and this adds asymmetry to risk/reward
- Equities saw a waterfall decline in the past week. In mid-August, such a waterfall decline was followed by a rally
- Incremental data, in our view, will be dovish, which will fuel further upside

The strength in crypto remains notable. Ethereum ETH +2.93% remains the best performing major macro asset in 3Q26 so far. This bodes well for crypto to outperform not only into month-end but also 4Q26.
